New research indicates few teens are sexting.

A study at the University of New Hampshire reveals only 2.5-percent of surveyed teens say they've sent or received sexual texts in the past year, and only 1-percent of those texts violate child pornography laws.

Researchers found sexual images were rarely distributed online and that 90-percent of the texts did not go beyond the intended recipient.

More than 1,500 kids and teens between the ages of 10 and 17 were surveyed.
