

COMMITMENT TO COMMUNITY

As a Land Grant University, UNH is committed to supporting and advancing the state's agricultural economy. Small, family farms are not only part of our state's heritage, but play a vital, active role in our current economy and culture. In recognition of the many benefits a vibrant agriculture affords in NH, our Local Harvest initiative raises awareness and educates students, staff and community members about our local agricultural landscape and its role in sustaining our physical and economical health and well-being - now and in the future.

As part of this initiative, UNH Dining provides foods grown and produced locally, many organic, in all of its locations. We continue to offer cage-free eggs, local honey and organic Fair Trade coffee to our extensive menu of local goods. In addition, UNH Dining provides collection services and financial support to the UNH Compost Program managed by the College of Life Sciences and Agriculture (COLSA). This year UNH Dining in collaboration with COLSA, the Parent's Association and the Office of Sustainability purchased a new tractor and compost turner that will ensure the existence of the Compost Program for another generation. The finished compost is available for purchase to the general public. For more information about Local Harvest, log on to www.unh.edu/dining/community/local-harvest.html
