DURHAM, NH – Hillary Clinton is the early frontrunner among candidates in New Hampshire for the Democratic nomination for President in 2008. Among Republicans, John McCain and Rudy Giuliani are tied.

These findings are based on the latest Granite State Poll,[?] conducted by the University of New Hampshire Survey Center. The Granite State Poll is sponsored by CNN and WMUR-TV, Manchester. Six hundred sixty-four (664) randomly selected New Hampshire likely primary voters were interviewed by telephone between February 1 and February 5, 2007. Included in the sample were 353 likely 2008 Democratic Primary voters (margin of sampling error +/- 5.2%) and 311 likely 2008 Republican Primary voters (margin of sampling error +/- 5.6%).

An Historic Primary

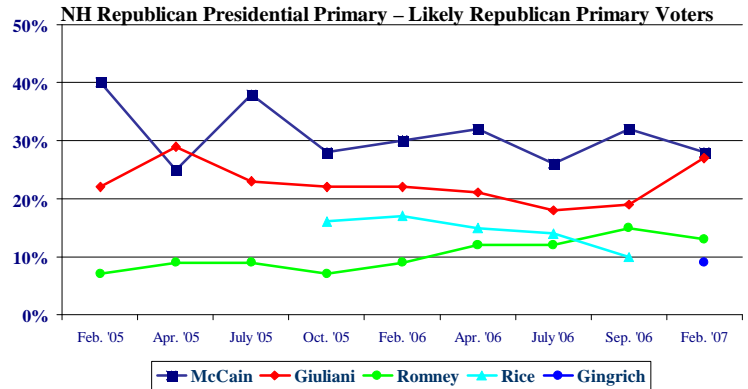

New Hampshire has held the First in the Nation Primary since 1920 and interest in the 2008 primary is especially high. Several prospective Republican and Democrat candidates have made high visibility trips to New Hampshire in recent weeks as the campaign to woo supporters and campaign workers is in full swing. And as this is the first election since 1952 that neither a sitting President nor Vice President is running for election, there have been a record number of candidates of both parties testing the water in New Hampshire. Not surprisingly, interest in the primary is quite high – 41% of likely voters say they are extremely interested in the race already, 34% are very interested, 21% are somewhat interested and only 4% are not very interested or don't know. The Granite State Poll has been monitoring voter sentiment about potential candidates since February 2005.

Republican Primary

Among likely Republican Primary voters, Arizona Senator John McCain has consistently been the most popular, picking up where he left off in 2000. But in the most recent CNN / WMUR Granite State Poll, former New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani has pulled into a dead heat with McCain. Currently, 28% of likely Republican Primary voters say they will vote for McCain, 27% will vote for former New York City Mayor Rudy Giuliani, 13% favor Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney, and 9% prefer former Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich. Among less popular potential candidates are Colorado Congressman Tom Tancredo (3%), Kansas Senator Sam Brownback (2%), former New York Governor George Pataki (1%), Nebraska Senator Chuck Hagel (1%), former Arkansas Governor Mike Huckabee (1%), Texas Congressman Ron Paul (1%), former Wisconsin Governor Tommy Thompson (1%), while 1% favor some other candidate and 13% are undecided.

One of the things that makes the New Hampshire Primary unique is that undeclared voters, often called independents, can vote in either primary. Currently, undeclared voters say they plan to vote in the Democratic primary by a 68% to 32% margin. This means that the Republican primary is likely to consist of far fewer independent voters than in 2000 when McCain won handily over George W. Bush. McCain has consistently led among potential Republicans since 2005 and has hovered near 30% throughout that period. He is most popular among moderate and liberal Republicans. Giuliani has consistently been in second place with approximately 20% since 2005 and is most popular among young Republican voters. Mitt Romney has stayed in third place since 2005 and is most popular among recent arrivals to New Hampshire.

Republican Favorability Ratings

Giuliani, McCain, and Romney are the best known and most popular candidates among Republican primary voters. Giuliani, although he has not officially declared his candidacy, is the most popular GOP candidate with 70% of likely voters saying they have a favorable opinion of him, 14% have an unfavorable opinion, 13% are neutral, and 3% don't know enough about him to say. His net favorability rating is a very high +56%. Giuliani has high favorability ratings among most voters, but receives his highest ratings among union households, newcomers to New Hampshire, and voters who do not attend church.

McCain is the second most favorable Republican candidate – 59% of likely Republican primary voters have a favorable opinion of him, 27% have an unfavorable opinion, 11% are neutral, and 3% don't know enough about him to say. McCain's net favorability rating is +32%. McCain is viewed most favorably by self identified moderates and liberals and recent arrivals to NH.

Romney has solid favorability ratings with 53% having a favorable opinion of him, 27% are unfavorable, 13% are neutral, and 8% don't know enough to say. Romney's net favorability rating stands at +26%. While there has been some concern about Romney's ability to attract religious voters. This does not appear to be a problem in New Hampshire as 49% of regular church goers have a favorable opinion of Romney and only 21% have an unfavorable opinion of him.

Gingrich is well known, but he has significant unfavorables among Republican voters – 41% have a favorable opinion of Gingrich, 42% have an unfavorable opinion of him, 12% are neutral, and 4% don't know enough to say. His net favorability rating is a very low -1%. Gingrich is viewed most favorably by Conservatives and older voters.

None of the other Republican candidates are particularly well known or liked by Republican voters. Although he has visited New Hampshire several times and has been a visible GOP critic of the war in Iraq, Hagel is relatively unknown and is disliked by Republican primary voters – 56% don't know anything about him and his net favorability rating is -9%. Huckabee has also visited NH several times but remains relatively unknown – 59% don't know anything about him and his net favorability rating is +1%.

Pataki has indicated he is dropping out of the race. While he is relatively well known (only 23% say they don't know anything about him), his net favorability rating is only +3%.

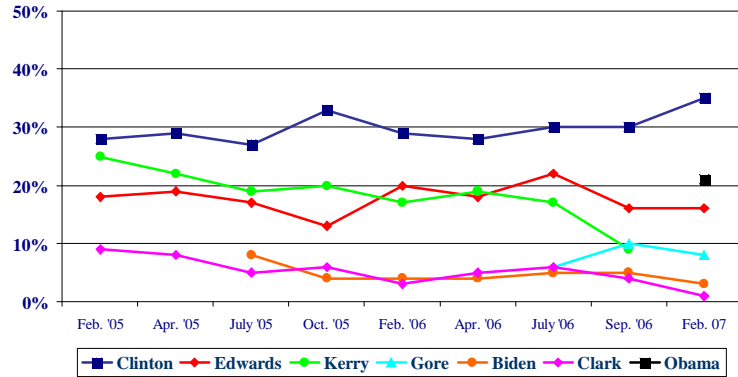

Tommy Thompson is unknown to 57% of likely voters and his net favorability rating is -3%. Sixty percent of likely primary voters don't know anything about Brownback – his net favorability rating is -2%. Tancredo is unknown to 66% of likely GOP primary voters and his net favorability rating is -1%. California Congressman Duncan Hunter is unknown to 69% of likely GOP primary voters and his net favorability rating is -10%. 70% of likely primary voters don't know anything about former Virginia Governor Jim Gilmore – his net favorability rating is -8%. Ron Paul is unknown to 73% of likely GOP primary voters – his net favorability rating is -6%. Businessman John Cox is unknown to 75% of likely GOP primary voters and his net favorability rating is -8%.

Democratic Primary

New York Senator Hillary Clinton has consistently been the most popular of the potential Democratic candidates. Clinton currently has the support of 35% of likely Democratic Primary voters followed by Illinois Senator Barack Obama with 21%, former North Carolina Senator John Edwards (16%), former Vice President Al Gore (8%), Delaware Senator Joe Biden (3%), retired General Wesley Clark (1%), New Mexico Governor Bill Richardson (1%), former Iowa Governor Tom Vilsack (1%), and Connecticut Senator Chris Dodd (1%), while 14% are undecided.

Clinton has been near 30% for the past two years and remains the frontrunner. She gets her strongest support from lower income voters. Obama has only recently entered the race but has immediately become a significant candidate. His support is consistent among all groups. Edwards gets his strongest support from union households and 50 to 64 year old voters. Support for Clark and Biden has dropped off since 2005.

NH Democratic Presidential Primary – Likely Democratic Primary Voters

Democratic Favorability Ratings

The best known and most popular candidates in the Democratic primary are John Edwards, Hillary Clinton, and Barack Obama. Edwards has the highest favorability rating of any of the Democratic candidates – 74% of likely Democratic Primary voters have a favorable opinion of him, 13% have an unfavorable opinion, 9% are neutral and 3% don't know enough about him to say. His net favorability rating is +61%. Edwards has broad favorability across all demographic groups.

Clinton is also very popular – 74% of likely Democratic primary voters have a favorable opinion of her, 15% have an unfavorable opinion, 9% are neutral, and 1% don't know enough about her to say. Her net favorability rating is +59%. Clinton has broad support but is viewed least favorably by voters who support the war in Iraq and the surge there.

Obama is viewed favorably by 67% of likely Democratic primary voters, 12% view him unfavorably, 8% are neutral and 13% don't know enough about him to say. Obama's net favorability rating is +55%. He has wide support and is viewed most favorably by voters with high levels of income and education. His lowest favorability ratings come from voters with lower levels of education.

Although he has not declared his candidacy, Gore is viewed favorably by 63% of likely Democratic voters, 27% view him unfavorably, 8% are neutral, and 1% don't know enough about him to say. Gore's net favorability rating is +37%.

Al Sharpton is the least popular of potential Democratic candidates – only 14% of likely Democratic primary voters have a favorable opinion of him, 57% have an unfavorable opinion of him, 13% are neutral, and 16% don't know enough about him to say. Sharpton's net favorability rating is a very low -43%.

Clark ran for President in 2004 but has not maintained his popularity – 36% have a favorable opinion of Clark, 28% have an unfavorable opinion of him, 17% are neutral, and 19% don't know enough about him to say. Clark's net favorability rating is only +8%.

Biden made a serious misstep last week and this appears to have hurt his candidacy – only 29% of likely Democratic primary voters have a favorable opinion of him, 25% have an unfavorable opinion of him, 18% are neutral, and 29% don't know enough about him to say. Biden's net favorability rating is only +4%.

Dodd is relatively unknown for a New England Senator – only 22% of likely Democratic primary voters have a favorable opinion of Dodd, 20% have an unfavorable opinion of him, 19% are neutral, and 39% don't know enough about him to say. Dodd's net favorability rating is only +2%.

And although he has made several visits to New Hampshire, Richardson is largely unknown to Democratic primary voters – only 26% have a favorable opinion of him, 17% have an unfavorable opinion, 14% are neutral, and 43% don't know enough about him to say. Richardson's net favorability rating is +9%.

Vilsack is also largely unknown -- only 7% of likely Democratic primary voters have a favorable opinion of him, 18% have an unfavorable opinion, 18% are neutral, and 57% don't know enough about him to say. Vilsack's net favorability rating is -11%.

Dennis Kucinich is not viewed favorably by likely voters – 24% have a favorable opinion of him, 31% have an unfavorable opinion of him, 12% are neutral, and 33% don't know enough about him to say. Kucinich's net favorability rating is -7%.

Former Alaska Senator Mike Gravel is the least known Democratic candidate – only 5% of likely Democratic primary voters have a favorable opinion of Gravel, 15% have an unfavorable opinion of him, 13% are neutral, and 67% don't know enough about him to say. Gravel's net favorability rating is -10%.

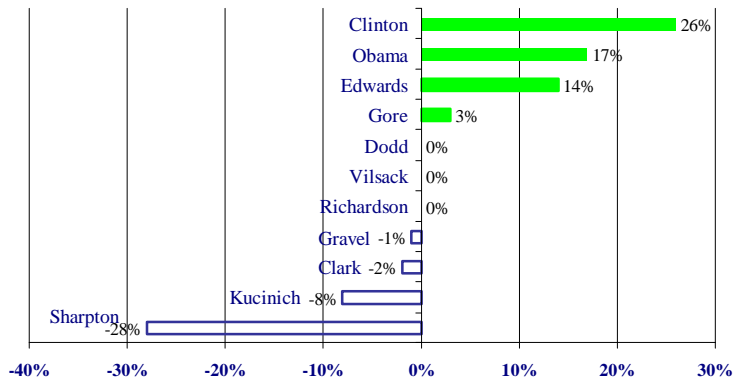

Least Popular Democratic Candidate

All likely primary voters (both Republicans and Democrats) were also asked which candidate they liked least. Among potential Democratic presidential candidates, Hillary Clinton is the least liked, named by 29% of all likely primary voters, followed by Sharpton (22%), Gore (7%), Kucinich (6%), Biden (4%), and Obama (4%) with 8% naming some other candidate and 22% saying they don't know.

Among only likely Democratic Primary voters, Sharpton is least liked of the potential Democratic candidates, named by 28%, followed by Clinton (9%), Kucinich (9%), Biden (5%), Gore (5%), Obama (4%), Clark (3%), Edwards (2%), another candidate (4%), and 30% don't know.

A summary measure of popularity can be constructed by subtracting the percentage who dislike a particular candidate from the percentage who say they plan to vote for that candidate. On this measure of net popularity, Clinton is the most popular Democratic candidate with +26%, followed by Obama (+17%), and Edwards (+14%). The least popular of the potential Democratic candidates among likely Democratic Primary voters are Sharpton (-28%), Kucinich (-8%), Clark (-2%), and Gravel (-1%).

Granite State Poll Methodology

These findings are based on the latest Granite State Poll, conducted by the University of New Hampshire Survey Center. The Granite State Poll is sponsored by CNN and WMUR-TV, Manchester. Six hundred sixty-four (664) randomly selected New Hampshire likely primary voters were interviewed by telephone between February 1 and February 5, 2007. Included in the sample were 353 likely 2008 Democratic Primary voters (margin of sampling error +/- 5.2%) and 311 likely 2008 Republican Primary voters (margin of sampling error +/- 5.6%). Results reported for other subgroups have potential for somewhat larger variation than those for the entire population.

The data have been weighted to adjust for numbers of adults and telephone lines within households, respondent sex, and region of the state. In addition to potential sampling error, all surveys have other potential sources of non-sampling error including question order effects, question wording effects, and non-response.
