Talk (open to all)

1,001 Stories on Water and Climate Change

Thursday, February 15th
12:40 - 2:00 pm • MUB Theater 2

Since the September 2014 People's Climate March, Devi Lockwood has been traveling in 16 countries (half of that by bicycle) on a mission to record 1,001 stories on water and climate change. Her aim is to humanize an issue often discussed in numerical terms: millimeters of sea level rise, degrees of temperature change, or numbers of people displaced. Come hear how her journey began and some of the 750+ stories she has recorded on the road. Lockwood will reflect on what her travels taught her about how people around the world are living with climate change now.

In May 2014, Lockwood graduated Phi Beta Kappa, summa cum laude from Harvard University where she studied Folklore & Mythology. In November 2016, she attended the U.N. climate talks in Morocco as a youth delegate with SustainUS. Lockwood is currently creating a web-based map where visitors can listen to stories on water or climate change she collected from numerous countries. Lockwood's writing has been published in The New York Times, The Guardian, and Bicycling Magazine. Lockwood is a recent recipient of a National Geographic Explorers grant and will record stories from an indigenous Arctic Circus in Igloodik, Nunavut, Canada in May 2018.
