PIRC Prevention Intern
Job Description

Prevention Innovations Research Center (PIRC) is seeking an undergraduate or graduate student to help with research projects focused on preventing sexual and relationship violence and stalking at PIRC for 8-10 hours/week in the Fall 2018 Semester. This student should be interested in the field of sexual and relationship violence prevention and response. This student will report directly to the Executive Director of Practice at PIRC. This position has the potential to be a full year if desired by the applicant.

Responsibilities:
- Take notes at meetings, organize them and relay them back to research teams.
- Help write and edit scholarly research papers to be disseminated about the project.
- Help maintain the various PIRC websites.

Requirements:
- Interest in the PIRC mission of ending sexual and relationship violence and stalking
- Strong written and verbal communication skills
- Organized, responsible and innovative
- Professionalism, as this job will require interactions with individuals outside of the university
- Ability to work well with others and collaborate effectively
- Creativity and enthusiasm a must 😊

Skills gained:
- Expertise in sexual violence prevention strategies and techniques, from nationally-recognized experts
- Experience in data collection, analytics and evaluation
- Experience working in a fast-paced research center setting
- Experience writing scholarly research papers
- Experience interacting with professionals who work in the field of sexual and relationship violence and stalking
- Enhanced knowledge of the conversation around sexual and relationship violence and stalking

Interested? Send your resume and a writing sample to PIRC Project Director, Becca Ludecke at Rebecca.Ludecke@unh.edu