Postdoctoral Diversity and Innovation Scholars

Postdoctoral Scholar in Women and Gender Studies and Geography

College of Liberal Arts

Department: Women and Gender Studies / Geography

Description: The Departments of Women's and Gender Studies and Geography at the University of New Hampshire invite applications for a two-year postdoctoral joint appointment to start in fall 2021. Candidates should have expertise in feminist or gender geographies from an African American, Indigenous, Africana, Latinx, Asian American, or transnational perspective. Applicants should hold a doctoral degree in Geography by the time of appointment or otherwise identify as a Geographer.

The candidate should demonstrate interest in interdisciplinary research collaboration, be committed to diversity and social justice in research and teaching and show promise of scholarly excellence as well as enthusiasm for undergraduate teaching. The teaching load is one course per year with remaining time devoted to independent research and professional development.

Additional professional development support will be provided in the form of participation in faculty development academies with other early career tenure-track faculty, coaching by senior faculty colleagues, workshops on teaching and learning, involvement in department activities, and support funds. The Scholar will also attend workshops on grant writing and the development of a long-range funded research plan.
