The Department of Education and The Aulbani J. Beauregard Center for Equity, Justice, and Freedom collaboratively present:

Anti-Racism, Equity, and Womxn Virtual Speaker Series 2020-21

This year’s theme is organized around the scholarly work and experiences of faculty, administrators, and students across campus at all stages of their careers. Recognizing that we have much to learn, we aim to be responsive to internal and external challenges, discrimination, and inequities against non-white, womxn in the Academy and to strengthen our UNH community.

UNH Class of 2021 Student Panel: February 26, 9:00 -9:50 am

Emily Baker

Emily is a Senior in Anthropology from New Hampshire, Montreal, and Wisconsin. Emily is a member of the McNair Scholars program and works in the Beauregard Center.

Taryn Duncan

Taryn is a senior Women’s and Gender Studies major, minoring in Anthropology and Justice studies. Her hobbies include reading and painting, and she works in the Beauregard Center.

Curtis Linton

Curtis is a senior student-athlete in Mechanical Engineering from Brookside, Delaware. Curtis is a two-year member of the McNair Scholars Program.

Julian Maduro

A Justice Studies and English dual major, Julian has both a passion for creative writing and criminology. Julian has pursued her love for literature and social issues through her research with the McNair Scholars Program on diversity in children's books.

All discussions take place via Zoom at https://unh.zoom.us/j/9377840679