For close to 10 years the University of New Hampshire has used Eaton Corporation's emergency alert system (roamsecure) as our primary emergency campus alert system. Recently, Eaton Corporation merged with Everbridge Corporation, the leading critical communications platform built on a secure, scalable and reliable infrastructure with multiple layers of redundancy to enable the rapid delivery of critical communications, with near real-time verification, over numerous devices and contact paths.

I am sensitive to the nature of our emergency alert communications and, my team along with UNH IT Security Services has collaborated with the teams from Eaton and Everbridge to create a seamless migration. There will be no disruption of UNH alerts during the migration process.

On Monday October 24, 2016 you will receive an email from the Everbridge Corporation authored by me that provides you with a link to your migrated UNH Alert account. I ask that you take just a few minutes to follow the link and review your migrated UNH Alert account for accuracy.

If you are no longer interested in receiving UNH Alerts, please email my team at UNH.Alertinfo@unh.edu and, you will be removed from our system.

My team and I work for you. We are excited with our new relationship with Everbridge Corporation which aligns with our mission to provide the best-in-class solutions with our emergency notification strategy.

Very best regards,
